ALEX LUCIO

PRESS KIT

Stories set at the seam where ordinary life is stitched to something much larger

Alex Lucio with Baloo · Photo: Rebecca Fernandez

Headshot · Photo: Rebecca Fernandez

Photographs and cover images are available at print resolution on request.

IN ONE SENTENCE

Alex Lucio is a novelist, inventor, and founder of two medical companies who writes stories set at the seam where ordinary life is stitched to something much larger.

CONTACT

Interviews, appearances, review copies — Rebecca Fernandez, Executive Assistant · rebecca@AdyCoPartners.com

Review copies of The Weight of the Wound — Wipf & Stock (publicity contact to be confirmed)

alexlucio.me · weightofadog.com · X @AuthorAlexLucio · Instagram @AlexLucioAuthor · YouTube @AlexLucio-Author · LinkedIn /in/aalucio

BIOGRAPHY

Alex Lucio

Novelist · Inventor · Founder

ONE PARAGRAPH

Alex Lucio is the author of The Weight of a Dog, Baloo & the Pond That Held Everything, the forthcoming The Weight of the Wound (Wipf & Stock, first quarter 2027), and the novel No Son Is Known. Before turning to fiction, he founded and led two companies — 3B Medical, a vertically integrated medical device firm that commercialized 26 devices and exited through acquisition, and Assure Infusions, the first fully automated IV fluid manufacturing facility in the United States — and holds 26 U.S. patents in medical device design. The Weight of a Dog is in development as a limited series. He lives in central Florida with his wife, Esther, and two bulldogs.

ONE PAGE

Alex Lucio was born and raised in Florida. He spent thirty years building precision systems in medical devices, pharmaceuticals, and robotics. He founded 3B Medical, scaling it to 26 commercialized devices and a successful acquisition, and then Assure Infusions, where he designed from first principles the first no-human-touch IV fluid plant in the country. He holds 26 U.S. patents.

He builds novels the same way: every component placed early and deliberately, every quiet detail carrying current, wired so the reader who opens the case a second time finds a different machine. His books share one subject — the supernatural mystery at the edges of ordinary life, the very large leaning quietly on the very small.

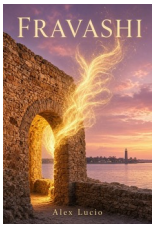

The Weight of a Dog (2026), a novel of grief, acoustic archaeology, and an old bulldog who hums at a frequency the world forgot, was released the same year as a full-cast cinematic audiobook with original score, and is in development as a limited series; Lucio wrote the pilot screenplay. Baloo & the Pond That Held Everything (2026) is a first book of physics told as a fable. The Weight of the Wound (Wipf & Stock, first quarter 2027) is nonfiction: how suffering, story, and science point to Christ, assembled from a lifetime of reading and from an afternoon in 2009 he cannot remember. His novel No Son Is Known is currently on submission, and a further novel, Fravashi, is in progress.

Lucio lives on a lake in central Florida. His loves are his wife, Esther; his four-year-old granddaughter, who lives next door; and his bulldogs, Baloo and Bella. He loves reading, writing, mountains, and travel, and describes himself as a tinkerer and a thinker.

THE SHELF

Five books, one subject

The supernatural mystery at the edges of ordinary life — the very large leaning quietly on the very small. Listed newest first.

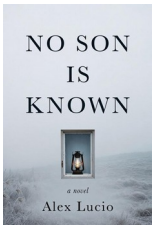

Fravashi

A novel · In progress

A modern retelling of a Persian fable in the key of magical realism, set among the tides, saints, and buried secrets of St. Augustine, Florida. A daughter comes home ten years after her brother drowned, to a town where the dead walk under the lamps and you can see only what you have not lied about.

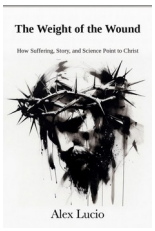

Cover shown is provisional

No Son Is Known

A novel · Literary fiction · On submission

A strange inheritance calls a silent, hardworking father and his fourteen-year-old son to a hill farm held by an 1874 trust that asks for a year and a day, a lamp in the window on four ancient nights, and an oak line never cut. The land seems to recognize the boy.

The Weight of the Wound

Nonfiction · How Suffering, Story, and Science Point to Christ

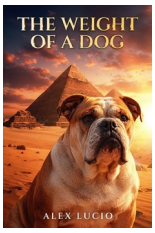

Wipf & Stock · First quarter 2027 · ISBN pending

Baloo & the Pond That Held Everything

A first book of physics, told as a fable · Illustrated · 2026

Hardcover ISBN 9798318852961 · Paperback ISBN 9798318852978

The Weight of a Dog

A novel · 2026

Illustrated second edition, ASIN B0HGP9QRGD · First edition, ASIN B0GTBZ6DKB · weightofadog.com

Cinematic audiobook, 2026 · Aloud by AdyCo · Audible ASIN B0HHHZGKD6 · Unabridged full cast with sound design and original score · Executive producer Alex Lucio · Sound design Panos Koutselinis · Cover Marko Mar · Voices: AI-generated full cast, human-directed (ElevenLabs) · Adapted from the illustrated second edition

> “I build novels the way I once built medical devices: every component placed early and deliberately, every quiet detail carrying current, wired so the reader who opens the case a second time finds a different machine. I write to reward the second reading of the story.”
>
> — Alex Lucio

SCREEN

The Weight of a Dog

A grounded sci-fi drama limited series · Eight episodes

Created by Alex Lucio · Pilot screenplay by Alex Lucio · Series adaptation by Anthony Giulianti · Produced by Saturn Harvest LLC · Executive producer Brandon Blake, Blake & Wang P.A.

In development.

COMPANIES

Assure Infusions — Founder · CEO Emeritus. The first fully automated, no-human-touch IV fluid manufacturing facility in the United States.

3B Medical — Founder · CEO Emeritus. Vertically integrated medical device company; 26 devices commercialized; exited through acquisition.